- ce. Four military and political schools were established in Northeast China military districts, but the locations of these schools are not known.
- 2. Each school will have between 500 and 2,500 students; if requirements are greater, branch schools may be established. The students must be patriotic men and women between the ages of 16 and 27 years, who have an education consisting of or equivalent to that obtained at the end of the second year of junior middle school. Their political composition has to be pure and their personal history faultless. School children, cadre personnel in active service, employed workers and demobilized men are not eligible.
- 3. Every student will undergo a one year training program, with political training as the primary consideration and military science taking a secondary place. The basic aim of this training, from a political standpoint, will be to indoctrinate the student with a revolutionary philosophy of life and to indue him with revolutionary thoughts of service for the cople and for the people's armed forces. In addition, each student must receive general military training and become oriented toward the life of a revolutionary soldier. He must learn to understand the auties of the army political pervice and make an honest effort to learn the thoughts of MAC Tse-tung. Upon graduation the student will be given his assignment the military district and paid on the "random system."
